

Present Perfect in Everyday Situations

Form: use have/has + past participle.

- Affirmative: We have updated the firewall. / The server has restarted.
- Negative: We have not checked the backup. / The application has not responded.
- Question: Have you tested the new password policy? / Has the system recorded the error?

The present perfect is used for actions that happened in the past but are connected to the present. It is also used for life experiences or actions that started in the past and are still continuing.

Use the simple past for an action completed at a stated, finished time: I found the configuration error at 14:30 yesterday.

Tasks:

1. Complete the bug-support log

Complete each gap with the present perfect or simple past form of the verb in brackets.

Yesterday, a user _____ (report) a login problem at 09:15. I _____ (check) the authentication logs immediately and _____ (identify) an outdated security certificate. This morning, I _____ (renew) the certificate and _____ (test) access on the user's account. The user can log in again. I _____ (record) the incident in the support system and _____ (update) the ticket. I _____ (inform) the user about the fix. The new certificate _____ (resolve) the login issue, and we _____ (receive) any further error reports.

2. Writing a report

Write a short report about a bug you have fixed. Write 70–90 words for an internal workplace audience.

1. Problem and current status State what has happened or what you have found. Describe the bug and its current relevance. Use the present perfect where appropriate.
2. Actions at a finished time Explain what you did and when. Include at least two simple past verbs and a finished-time reference such as yesterday, this morning or at 09:15.
3. Result and next step Explain what has changed now and what should happen next. Use at least two present perfect forms to describe the result and any follow-up action.
